About

GT Sectra is a contemporary serif typeface combining the calligraphy of the broad nip pen with the sharpness of the scalpel. It was originally designed for use in the long-form journalism magazine “Reportagen” and now expanded to its three subfamilies: GT Sectra, GT Sectra Fine, and GT Sectra Display.

GT Sectra was originally designed for the German-language magazine Reportagen, a bi-monthly publication specializing in literary reporting. Its long-form stories require a type-face that works well in text, but not at the expense of character. GT Sectra strikes that balance.

Development

Process

The felt pen shows the skeleton of the typeface. The broad nib pen, with its angled stroke, defines the flesh of the letters. The scalpel knife then adds sharpness and definition to the final shapes.

| Overall |                     | The very low contrast between thick and thin strokes makes GT Sectra a pragmatic workhorse. It spots large ink traps and a very balanced, even color, making it work great for long texts despite its strong character. | Compared to GT Sectra, GT Sectra Fine is a bit more sparkly and delicate, with a higher contrast between thick and thin strokes, similar to classic serif typefaces. | GT Sectra Display has a much higher contrast, and it contains two weights not found in the other subfamilies. The 90° angles of the serifs enable tight typesetting for punchy headlines. |
